

KONA COFFEE COUNTRY

Almost all coffee farms, mills and other stops noted are run by families or small business owners. On this driving tour, the participants invite you to intimately share with them their love for Kona coffee, and the history and culture that make this such a celebrated brew.

These are true country roads, many not marked, so be patient and allow for plenty of time. If you find yourself at the wrong door, please remember to treat their neighbors kindly. Always call ahead because things change, double check for hours and days of operation, and it's a good idea to make an appointment. Good luck and above all, have some fun.

Many of the tour stops on the map are identified with reference to mile markers. Be on the lookout for these green markers and you should be able to find even the hardest to reach farms with ease.

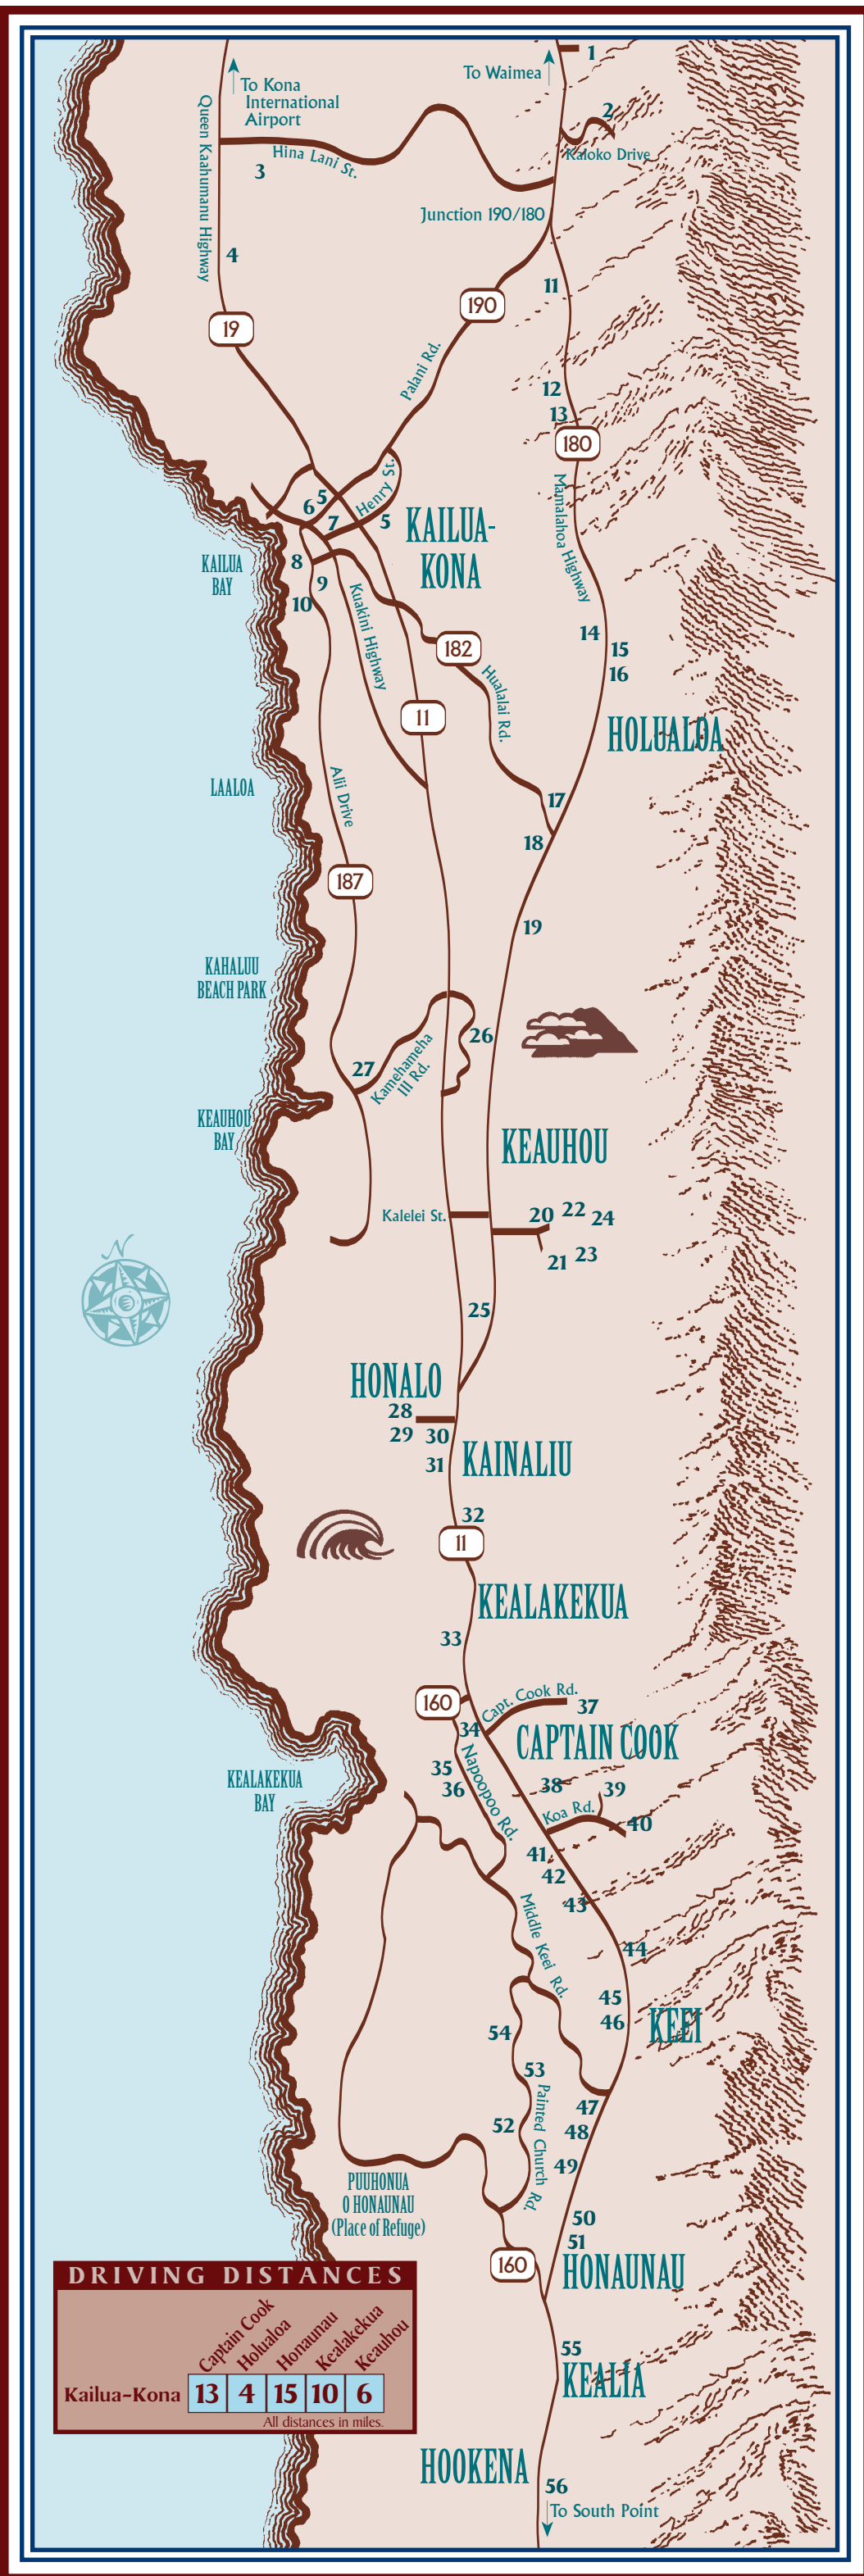

Wherever your Kona Coffee Country tour takes you, we are certain you will enjoy the time well spent.
